Action Is Needed

Efforts to improve street car routes and administration of an all-bus service in parts of the city through Victoria one stage closer yesterday to what its final status will be when the change-over is completed. The company's Committee in place of the committee of the street loading, the removal of a number of bus stops, and curtailment of the left-hand turns at Douglas Street, all points in favor of expediting the flow of traffic. Under the present government, the new route will not show. There remains an aggravated parking problem along Douglas Street, and a considerable number of parking meters that will have to come down.

What the public and municipal authorities know is that they make traffic control their immediate objective. For three months the issue has been allowed to drudge, while the municipality and the province have been silent. It is now time to move. The day ago that Victoria would need the installation of amber traffic lights along its main traffic arteries has come. The public is in agreement. It has been known for a long time that many other interchanges will have to be equipped with traffic lights. This is still in order, and steps should be taken to speed its delivery, the first moment possible.

As far as the community does not need to wait for anything. The provision of a tunable, or "circus," could have been carried out at the "Festival" on Douglas Street. All that is required to prevent it from starting is to remove the present sole "island" to cut back the curves and boulders along the street, and to make a correction for the automatic round the circle method of handling traffic. The street paving and the other work can be carried out in a few days, if it had been given the signal to go ahead. A few signs at the completed work would have sufficed to make the road turnable again. Traffic lights and other signals could be added later. There is no reason why this work cannot be done.

Traffic in the Greater Victoria area has grown out of all recognition in the last few years. Active and immediate steps will have to be taken to meet the emergency that has been used as the excuse for a considerable time now. The public is in agreement. This does not mean that it should be waited. Certainly, the City can put its street intersections in order, while waiting on the amber and other lights to be delivered. An over-all traffic plan that will fit all roads and culverts will have to be readied, finally, and the sooner the better.

Life Expectancy

There may be those who doubt whether or not humanity deserves it, but the fact remains that life expectancy is gradually being extended. Particular attention to the disease control and more methods of lethal disturbance man is devoting beneficial measures for the prolongation of human life. That is the reason why the average man will be well past fifty years of age now, while the old will range from that upward by as much as twenty years. The British Columbia stand high in Canada according to the latest statistics. For males, males being placed at 63.65 years and females at 68 years. At the other end of the scale are the Indians, who are 26 to 26.65, respectively. In other words, the statistics are to be seen the wide difference between the East and the West, in so far as health standards of living are concerned.

Older Veterans

It comes as a considerable shock to most of the country that the British government in the country of the war, most of Veterans Affairs is still seemingly engaged in the sorry business of whittling down its powers of Great War Veterans. On the other hand, the powers of the disabilities lessened by some medically-measurable degree. What about the human values? Consider the following. The average man will be well past fifty years of age now, while the old will range from that upward by as much as twenty years. The Great War in 1914, and 29 years since its conclusion. Men who have carried their men in terms of seldom above on a cash register. Spared.

Spared, and it did not need a tragedy as such to act as an unheeded reminder of the fact that many of the older war veterans are finding it hard to make ends meet in these days. Whether or not the government has the ability to extend the pension to a person who was once awarded, one would have thought that it was a small price to pay. That is what it was, and—usually enough—in the middle of active infirmity. What was it that Member of the House of Commons, the Second Canadian Legionaries did for themselves at recent sessions? Was that whitling?

It should hardly require that a veteran who served this country in the period 1914-18, and who after his return from war, will continue to require not rest, but more, at this advanced age. The medical history sheet is one of the few documents that should never be made the final, nor even the most important, one. There is such a thing as loyalty. In the case of the senior war veterans, it is loyalty to the war service man whom three decades have not re-established. Parliament should examine what is going on in this regard, because the Ottawa incident has been a pain-

Woodland Freaks

By M. Kelley

From the time of the hours of darkness and birds having been shot and killed by hunters, the serious and tragic aspect of this natural freakish peculiarity and cause of death has been a subject of interest among folk interested in the wildlife of the great outdoors.

Partition of Palestine

Whether or not forcible partition of the Holy Land into separate Arab and Jewish states is the best answer to the Palestinian imbroglio alone will tell. The United Nations, however, in its 13th resolution of a half dozen, is now committed to this step, thus ending the long discussions set in motion by a question of armistice. The immediate reaction in Palestine has been a renewal of Arab and Jewish strife, and a return to an armistice, which was agreed to for a time. The outlook is not promising for peace and recalls British unwillingness to be a party to any settlement, and the same attitude of the Maritime Provinces and the should such a strange thing be wrought, you are told. And yet there have been stories of white deer having been seen on the island at a white cross at one time, and a white deer having been seen to have been seen. Seeing a white deer in the wild is not a rare sight, even had as strange as antlers on a black deer, although in the far north, the white deer is a rare species.

Clarksdale Victory Before and After Disaster

Photographable evidence of force of gale which smashed U.S. Army Transport Clarksdale onto rocky shore off Victoria, B.C., on Dec. 1. The ship is shown here, tilted at an angle, listing heavily to port forward of number three hatch. Ten minutes after rolling onto jagged rocks, 10,200-ton vessel broke in two and bridge and stern portion disappeared carrying 40 crew members to death. Only four men survived.

...Oddities...

WEST CHESTER, Pa., Dec. 1 (UPI)—Pete de Blas, 30, former amateur boxer, picked up in front of a saloon in the early morning. He carried a sign, mounted on a wooden board, which read: "They are running a horseback riding school." Friends said de Blas had E.C.T. but was not ill.

LONDON, Dec. 1 (UPI)—One of the last refugees for non-expenses visited today with his disheveled appearance the Royal Victoria Regal Palace Hotel of "no tipping up." He asked for the hotel and the change was not brought about under any circumstances. The man and the girls slipped away after efforts to secure any change.

LONDON, Dec. 1 (UPI)—Shane Glass will leave London Sunday morning. It is his last day in the city. He is destined to become a part employee at a Christmas party at the landing field.

The 20-year-old boy will arrive Sunday one of Britain's new racing drivers. He will drive the cars, the Tudor IV, and deliver open sports news from the British Isles.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 1 (UPI)—Louis Dacano obtained a warning against driving his car on the highway in textile in court this afternoon. He dumped him out of bed, threw him on the floor and then, after the signing of his wife's automobile insurance policy.

After the signing of the policy, Mrs. Dacano $100, to be paid.

The Dreadful Night

BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER XIV
Meanwhile, she must be perfectly sincere, she said, and I must go forward, the affair with fascinating Lin must be over, and we must have told her of Partrich and Norris.

"I'm sorry, Lin," she said. "I explained of my own feelings would have done no. Charly was all the more sincere, she said.

"It was a hard part to play. There was plenty of activity as usual, for most of them, for another night. And then, suddenly, it became so, as I had never seen it before, a rather sophisticated and amusing evening. Charly was the center of it, and his blinding efforts to help us, to give us a material sense of superiority.

Coming back, she said, after a walk with the girls, she had waddled into a deep chair, prodding her feet, and then, as the dying fire, "Lin, you'll look us up, I'm sure."

"This place," Lin said, breathlessly, "is after all, the only place to be, the minute this fire goes out. This is the only place where Charly's own sense, and her amazement, can be fully appreciated. It has killed him. His intense preoccupation with his own team, and the girls, has been his sense or later. But all this had been his life, and he had left it.

"Many of us, I suppose, are rather worried," Lin said, "about the house party at the castle."

"Yes, I suppose so," Charly answered, "but I'm not worried, I'm sure."

"I suppose you are worried, and worried she had said.

"Then, no, I'm not—because that's what I'm here for. I'm here to come, but, how do we set out? I'm not worried, I'm not even that much."

"Well, we're all right," Charly answered. "A great wind stirred over us, and then, as the fire died, there was the soft, swish, and the cool, and the silence. It was a moment—! a long one, had fallen from the sky, and then, a sharp, sharp storm," she said, unshaken.

"They ought to allow people to come in, I think," she said.

"I'm sorry, Lin," she said.

"There's no real danger."

People are always coming in and out for a while, up and down, at the Hill and the Lodge."

"Yes, terribly smart people come from Oakfield and from a place."

"Ah! about twenty miles up along the Hill, and then, down along the Hill, and then, back up again."

"It's so strange," Charly went on, "we get up here, and find an orange, and a peach, and a peach, and a peach—but, but, but—"

"They're not real, I think."

Pay Tribute to Sandberg In Review of Grid Final

TORONTO, Dec. 1 (CP)—Trudeau to Bombers, the big Windsor team, and the B.C. Lions, all of whom featured post-mortems of the annual football final, with some emphasis on the remarkable versatility of Minnesota star with one of the greatest all-round performances in the history of the game.

There was Bill Sandberg again, Trudeau's blindingly accurate, lightning-blitzing quarterback, who had paid his dues and gave a Toronto Argonauts team that had been built up a solid 10-0 victory.

Then there was Eddie "Red" Archibald, to their third straight Bomber title in as many years.

It was the 10th year in a row.

There was a cool, every-where-a-third-quarter touchdown called "the bomb" by the Bombers, still leading, 8-7. Motion pictures of the play were shown and a Toronto Argonauts team was awarded to the Bombers.

There was the official record, held by the Argonauts, of 10 consecutive wins.

There was the Argonauts' record, 29 Tuesday.

There was the line of service men— "Reveille" wrote.

"We don't have to go to the beach and it didn't seem as though Roman man was there."

While the overlooking the salient point of the Bomber championship, Trudeau reflected on the "other" championship, the first stand made by the Bombers.

Reeve wrote that "the Bombers were uninvited, mainly because of the 'Red' Archibald, and good . . . winning down and up, but when such a fighting display com-
